INDUSTRIAL TRAINING

The primary goal of industrial training is to familiarize students with the workings of the pharmaceutical industry, providing hands-on experience in various aspects such as drug handling, manufacturing, quality control, and assurance of formulations. Through practical training on instruments and job execution, participants can gain valuable knowledge and skills.

Specific objectives include:

- Offering students the chance to explore and assess their interest in a particular career path before committing to permanent roles.
- Developing practical skills in applying theoretical knowledge to real-world work scenarios.
- Cultivating skills and techniques directly relevant to their chosen careers within the pharmaceutical sector.
- Enhancing communication abilities by interacting with workgroups and learning appropriate corporate behavior in an industrial setting.
- Instilling strong moral values such as responsibility, commitment, and trustworthiness during the training period.
